KONG
KMS

by Jeff Everson

One highly regarded film critic, wrote about the 1933 original movie, KING KONG, that it was one of the best 100 movies ever made. He wrote (and I quote), "The heartbroken, heartbreaking look in Kong's eyes as the planes shoot the great ape off the Empire State Building, remains the greatest single special effects shot ever made."

In every KONG movie, KONG was always an exaggeration (taken to the absurd, the critics wrote). Supposedly, the original mechanical KONG stood 50 feet tall and had a full 36 feet circumference around his chest. His teeth were each a foot long and his thick hide was the equivalent of the fur of some 30 black bears.

Still, despite the characteristic thought of wild beast and angry monsters, in the end, KONG is at his essence, a love story. Now, speaking of love, (we are), it's no secret that males (and hopefully females too), in our society, like to think of passionate, lustful attraction and love as capable of producing big and full things, sort of a personal KONG for men and big and full 'healthy' orgasms for both!

Ahem... KONG - because it is a primary sexual enhancer for men, is perhaps, the most aptly named supplement ever, a sexual enhancer of some great magnitude. (I've already ordered my double box, but I have pre-warned those in the shipping Dept. that I probably am way beyond hope).

At any rate, KONG is the brainchild of one Herb Bryant. Bryant had just co-founded a weight-management health and nutrition company that then went public and acquired a new management team. So, Bryant went to work on deciding what dietary supplement category he should then concentrate on with his "other" privately-owned KMS Company. In so doing, Herb met with some of the marketing think-tankers at GNC, and became excited to learn from them that they "also" believed the fastest growing supplement category at GNC would soon be the "sexual health" category. Coincidentally, KMS' own market research had come to the same conclusion.

Herb Bryant was already on its way with conceptualizing KONG! In fact, KMS had already collaborated with leading herbal pharmacologists, in developing and testing a killer sexual performance formula, but had not decided on the final marketing strategy to launch it.

In 2001 KMS work-team, huddled and decided to name the new KMS product the muy macho KONG 'muy macho KONG and to promote Kong online via a positive and light-hearted marketing program, complete with weekly email broadcasts of "Kong Funnies". The idea was to not take that issue of sexual enhancement too seriously while at the same time delivering the most powerful and effective sexual enhancement product money could buy.

KONG was initially distributed online through www.getkong.com (crafted by Webmaster Tid) and Kong was an instant home run product as a result of the enthusiastic referrals of satisfied Kong Men.

Today Kong, Kong Black Voodoo and Kong Red Horn are marketed internationally by most major online supplement retailers including BodyBuilding.com, Vita-Digest.com and eVitamins.com in addition to direct sales at www.getkong.com and are one of the top selling male enhancement products of all time.

"Our goal was always to offer customers the best product and the best value. We are happy to have achieved that goal and will be offering a broader Kong product line in the future" - Chris Bisram, Sales Manager.

How does KONG work? Kong is scientifically formulated using select rainforest herbs and plants. Because 75% of the world's prescription drugs trace their roots to the Tropical Rain Forests KMS decided this would be the best place to begin our search for potent natural aphrodisiacs and vasodilators (blood flow facilitators) to include in Kong product formulations. The Kong formula is complex.

Detailed "How Kong Works" information is available at www.getkong.com However, the following are two highlighted ingredients, (not including vaso-dilators in Kong that support increased blood flow and "pump") that we can describe in this limited space.

Catuaba Bark and Muira Puama - (Brazil's Most Famous Aphrodisiacs) The Discovery Health Channel recently sent Chris Kilham, to the Brazilian Rainforest to research the libido-enhancing effects of many Rainforest Plants in local indigenous tribes, including the Catuaba and Muira Puama trees.

Chris reported that Catuaba, especially in combination with Muira Puama, (ingredients in Kong and Kong BV) were such popular sexual stimulants among men and women of the Tupi Indians those songs were composed praising the powers of Catuaba and Muira Puama.

Many wise Shamans reiterated that in their lifelong experience, "Catuaba and Muira Puama together can make people sexually young again."

Modern scientific studies are sparse but: In catuaba, a group of three alkaloids dubbed catuabine A, B and C are believed to enhance sexual function by stimulating the nervous system. We do not have double-blind clinical studies at this time for Catuabine A, B and C but that has not deterred the enthusiasm of the Tupi Indians or the thousands of worldwide users that swear by Catuaba extracts.

In the case of Muira Puama, European Chemists have identified a group of sterols including beta-sitosterol, naturally occurring in Muira Puama that are suspected to be responsible for the herb's aphrodisiac effects. In one French study incorporating Muira Puama, 51 percent of men with erectile problems reported improvement, and 62 percent experienced an increase in libido.

Kong products are formulated with ingredients sourced from the Catuaba and Muira Puama trees grown widely across the Amazon river basin and that have enjoyed centuries of effective use as bona fide aphrodisiacs." Kong has approved proprietary extraction methods to concentrate and preserve the active ingredients found in these amazing Brazilian plants, rich in active and beneficial phyto-chemicals which occur naturally in this plant and are part of the Kong and Kong Black Voodoo formulations.
